No Changes in Wage-Hour Act During Current Congress Term

House Members are
Irrked Over Week
Of Futile Debate
PLAN SHELVED

Labor Committee Ordered
To Make Further
Study of Amendments

Washington—(AP)—Disgusted over a week-long parliamentary fiasco, house members said today that their failure to agree on wage-hour amendments meant that the labor standards law would stand unchanged through the election-year campaign.

The feeling of many was reflected in the comment of Representative Short (R-Mo.): "Here we spend $500,000, argue for seven days and get nowhere in the end. The action of the house is indefensible."

The $500,000 was Short's estimate of the outlay for salaries and other expenses of the house during committee and floor consideration of the wage-hour problem.

Chairman Norton (D-N. J.) of the house labor committee was one of the first to say that the question of revisions was "out the window" for the session since the house, after slipping into an almost hopeless situation, ordered the committee yesterday to study amendments further.

Vote To Drop Fight
With some members confused by the change of rapid-fire votes, the chamber finally balloted 205 to 175 to pass no amendments at this time.

The week-long free-for-all centered around attempts to write into law definite exemptions for agricultural operations as a substitute for the present exemptions covering only "the area of production" as defined by the wage-hour administration.

Meanwhile, relatively swift progress was made in the campaign to amend legislation broadening the Hatch anti-politics bill from the house judiciary committee, which voted secretly to pigeonhole it earlier in the week.

Representative Dempsey (D-N. M.) reported he had obtained 103 of the 218 signatures necessary to force the measure out onto the house floor.

Editor of Communist Organ Is Convicted
Of Libel, Faces Term

New York—(AP)—Editor Clarence Hathaway of the Communist Daily Worker, convicted of criminal libel, opened to a possible year in prison when he comes up for sentencing May 17.

A special panel jury returned the verdict last night, convicting on the same charge the Communist Daily Worker, publisher of the paper, on the basis of articles appearing in the communist newspaper.

Liggett was shot by gunmen in 1938, five days before he was to appear before the legislature to impeach the late Governor Floyd B. Olson of Minnesota.

Hathaway was paroled in the custody of his counsel, Edward Kuntz, until Monday, when he was produced at $1,000.

Meanwhile a civil suit brought by Mrs. Liggett to compel payment by the newspaper and Hathaway of a libel judgment for $2,672 is pending. Trial has been set for May 6.

21 Arrested, Interned
By Netherlands Regime

The Hague—(AP)—Premier Dorek de Geer told the nation today in a broadcast that 21 persons "who endangered the security" of the Netherlands were arrested and interned during the night.

All those interned, he declared, were arrested on the basis of personal acts and not because of their political views.

"These measures have been taken in accordance with martial law, under which the military authorities have the right to take into detention people whose presence is considered dangerous to the order and general security of the country," De Geer said.

One of those placed under arrest was M. M. Rost van Tonningen, a Nazi member of parliament and editor of the national-socialist newspaper nationale dagblad.

Eau Claire Youth Is Facing Many Charges

Plymouth, Wis.—(AP)—Robert Russell, 24, of Eau Claire, waived a preliminary hearing yesterday on charges of possession of dynamite and burglary tools, and operation of an automobile without the owner's consent.

He was bound over to circuit court for trial, Justice of the Peace F. Volk fixed bond at $5,000.

Russell, arrested recently at Madison, also faces a charge of resisting an officer here. Additional charges have been filed against him by authorities at Chippewa Falls, Trausau, Kewaunee and Wisconsin Rapids.

Part of Road Plunges Into Old Mine Pit

Iron Mountain, Mich.—(AP)—A section of U. S. Highway 2 collapsed into the pit of an abandoned mine in downtown Iron Mountain late yesterday, plunging four automobiles, a truck and a contractor's shack into 90 feet of water.

Five men escaped by a hair-breadth. Irving Trudell, 26, of Iron Mountain, one of a group of motorists who had parked their cars near the highway to watch workmen filling in the pit, tried to drive his automobile away as the cave-in started. He was catapulted down the 45-foot embankment and thence into the water, where he swam until workers tossed him a rope and pulled him out.

The other men scrambled to safety, including Wesley Abeldt, truck driver employed on the project, who leaped from his truck which he had driven down a sloping embankment leading to the water shortly before the earth began to slide.

Loses New Sedan
The other motorists who escaped were Rudolph Bartolomeoli and Carlo Capra, both of Iron Mountain, and Paul Perkins of Green Bay, Wis. Perkins lost his brand new sedan in the mishap.

The pit, about 300 feet long and 150 feet wide, is an abandoned cave-in of the old Chapin mine. A fill-in support the transcontinental highway and Stevenson avenue, the city's main street, bisects the pit. The highway fill has been sinking gradually for years, and authorities today were considering permanent abandonment of the crossings.

The pit also is built up along the edges to support tracks of the Milwaukee and North Western railroads. All trains were rerouted as was highway traffic.

In all about 30 feet of the roadway slipped into the pit yesterday. A crowd of about 5,000 persons gathered at a safe distance as portions continued to break off and slide gradually into the water.

Workers planned attempts to raise the lost vehicles.

3 Youths Killed
In Auto Tragedy

Lake Mills, Wis.—(AP)—Three young athletes, two of them University of Wisconsin students, were killed in an automobile crash here last night.

The dead: Clair M. Mitchell of Monroe and Robert Hartwig and Carol Barsknecht of Lake Mills. Mitchell and Hartwig were sophomores at the university and both played basketball.

The young men, according to Police Chief August Sedkora, were riding in a car driven by Hartwig, which crashed against a tree on Highway 30 inside the eastern limits of Lake Mills about 10:30 p. m.

Barsknecht was killed instantly. Hartwig died on the way to a Watertown hospital and Mitchell died at the same hospital about 2 a. m. today.

Hartwig, an all-around athlete while at Lake Mills High school, was a member of the university varsity basketball squad several years ago. He was out of school for a time. Mitchell was center on the university freshman team last year. He was a brother of Lee Mitchell, former university basketball star. Barsknecht was a local baseball player.

Hartwig and Mitchell left Madison yesterday to visit the former's home. They went for a ride with Barsknecht at night and were returning when the crash occurred.

Thought He Swallowed Uppers—Lost Is Found

Milwaukee—(AP)—At dinner Alfred Mitchell, 74, coughed violently, clutched at his mouth and gasped: "My uppers—they're gone."

Alarmed relatives summoned a rescue squad, which worked for 20 minutes over Mitchell, who continued to cough intermittently.

At a hospital, physicians probed his throat but found no trace of the missing denture until they started to disrobe the patient for an x-ray.

The missing plate was in his coat pocket. His coughing, apparently caused by a food particle, soon subsided.

Heil Orders Inquiry Into Sports Board

Investigation Already Is Underway, Governor
Says

PUBLIC IS INVITED
Sportsmen Asked to Present Their Views at Open Hearings

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—The air of mystery associated with the Heil administration's proposed investigation of the state conservation department was partially dissipated late yesterday when Governor Heil announced personally that an investigation is in progress and that public hearings are scheduled.

The governor invited any citizens who have anything pertinent to offer to the state research bureau in its examination of the department's affairs to appear at the hearings, and yesterday afternoon the executive office dispatched telegrams to all members of the conservation commission announcing his decision to order a formal inquiry.

Hearings Started
Meanwhile it was disclosed that the research bureau has been quietly conducting hearings in several up-state communities and that transcripts of such testimony is now in the research department's files.

Although the capital air is thick with rumors about the department, there is yet little tangible evidence of the objectives and the purposes of the conservation department investigation, which is likely to develop into an acrimonious and controversial affair, it previous investigators by the legislature furnish a criterion.

In political and public interest, it is expected, the investigation will rival any project inaugurated by the Frey research department thus far. None of the acknowledged Heil administration spokesmen has ever intimated that there are any "irregularities" in the conservation department, in contrast to the statements made by Heil associates before and during the investigation of the state highway commission last fall.

At that time Frey publicly declared that the governor's office would encourage suits to recover sums of money allegedly due the state through the mismanagement of the highway commission.

Ask Consideration
For Conscientious
Objectors to War

Atlantic City, N. J.—(AP)—The Methodist church, in a declaration of its opposition to war, included today a plea that conscientious objectors be accorded consideration by the federal government.

"There is no common judgment among Christians as to what a Christian should do when his own nation becomes involved in war," read the declaration approved by the general conference last night.

"On this issue our own membership is divided. We believe, however, that the Christian church, in a world torn asunder by bitter conflict, must not permit itself to be divided over any matter...."

The conference also decided it would permit Methodist buildings to be used as places of refuge for war refugees. The delegates warmly welcomed an amendment which would make the anti-war stand refer only to "aggressive" wars.

To this proposal Dr. Ernest F. Tittle, C. Evanson III, chairman of the committee which drafted the pronouncement, said:

"We must not do again what we did 20 years ago when we fought a bloody war with the mistaken idea everything we held dear was at stake."

Trapeze Performer Is Hurt in 12-foot Fall

Manitowish—(AP)—Lucille Mumpfy, 19-year-old trapeze performer, suffered a fracture of the pelvis in a 12-foot fall to the floor of the vocational school gymnasium last night.

The girl fainted while doing her act in an indoor circus, part of the program of the Wisconsin Adult and Vocational Education association convention. Twelve hundred convention delegates were in the audience.

NORWEGIAN CITY RUINED BY GERMAN BOMBERS

Reverses in Norway Threaten To Oust Chamberlain Regime

Renew Hunt for Cleveland Killer

Police of Two States
Spurred by Discovery
Of Three Bodies

Pittsburgh—(AP)—Grim-faced police officials of two states, haunted 10 years by a mad butcher who has counted his victims at more than a score, mobilized today for a manhunt from Pittsburgh, dumping ground for three more mutilated bodies.

Detectives came from Cleveland, home of the madman's meanderings, as they did from Youngstown, Ohio, and New Castle, Pa., ports of call in a tour of death that led yesterday to a railroad siding near here where three surgically-sliced headless corpses were found in three box-cars.

The slaughter's trail, twisted and obscured by perhaps several months of time, apparently traced back to Cleveland, where in the downtown Kingsbury Run section residents for years have been terrorized by a man with a knife who has killed and eaten a dozen victims and left them dismembered in city dumps.

The trail seemed to follow the right-of-way of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie railroad, which skirts Kingsbury Run en route to Youngstown, then passes near New Castle, where a half-dozen persons have been found murdered. The cars in which the three victims were found yesterday had been consigned here from Youngstown (placing right of way points in proper order).

Showdown Is Near in Court on Powers of House Probe Group

Washington—(AP)—The Dies committee on un-American activities stood two steps closer today to a legal test of its powers.

Progress toward a showdown court was made yesterday when a grand jury indicted five witnesses, examined by the committee and when Federal Judge George A. Welsh ruled at Philadelphia that raids on Communist party offices by Dies' investigators were illegal.

Those indicted here were: Dr. Albert Blumberg, Baltimore; George Powers, Pittsburgh; Thomas F. P. O'Dea, president of the Young Communist League of Massachusetts; Philip Frankfield, executive secretary of the Communist party in Massachusetts; and James H. Dolson, Pittsburgh. The charges arose from the refusal of the men to answer committee questions regarding Communist activities.

At Philadelphia, Judge Welsh held that the search warrant under which the raids were made was defective.

Chairman Dies (D-Texas) said he intended to appeal Judge Welsh's "entirely wrong" decision.

Prohibition Party Set for Convention

Chicago—(AP)—The prohibition national committee announced today it was rallying its largest convention in 25 years to adopt a platform and nominate candidates for the presidential campaign.

Delegates from more than 30 states will open the session here Wednesday. The 1940 platform will be put together Thursday, and on Friday, the final day of the convention, the heads of the ticket will be nominated.

London—(AP)—Collapse of the British campaign in central Nor- way brought Prime Minister Cham- berlain's cabinet its sternest test of the war today as members of his own conservative party, hungry for military successes, showed signs of active rebellion.

Parliamentary sources indicated that unless a signal success for British arms is achieved before Tuesday when the house of commons begins an inquiry into the Norwegian reverse, the present government will face a bitter fight for its life.

An authoritative source declared meanwhile that Britain would continue to fight for Norway "with the greatest vigor."

This source spoke optimistically of the allied chances in the fight for Norway, far-north Norwegian or port pointing out that the distance of Norway from the German air base, "will undoubtedly prove to be in our favor."

Supplies Blown Up
It also was revealed by this source that after the French troops landed at Narvik, now abandoned by the allies part of their supplies and munitions were blown up.

Growing restiveness within the prime minister's party was evidenced last night when Richard K. Law, member of parliament for strongly conservative Hull declared that the government's "attitude toward the problem must be changed before the country is in sight of victory."

Clement Davies, Welsh member of parliament, a liberal national, and thus normally a supporter of the government, announced simultaneously that he had met with a group of colleagues who had decided to oppose any vote of confidence during "the biggest crisis we ever had to face."

"National Danger"
The Manchester Guardian raised its powerful voice to declare that the Chamberlain's "vacancy for self-deception is a national danger," in commenting upon the withdrawal of troops from Norway.

"What makes the taste of the whole episode more bitter," the Guardian said, "is that it follows so much shallow optimism, not to say boasting."

Law, whose father, Bonar Law, led the conservative party under Asquith, warned sternly against "widespread and highly-dangerous delusions that the war is going to win itself without loss or sacrifice, that time is on our side and that Hitler has missed the bus."

His reference to Hitler "missing the bus" was a direct slap at Chamberlain, who used the phrase in a speech April 4, five days before Germany invaded Norway and Denmark.

Hinckley to be Named To U. S. Commerce Job

Hyde Park, N. Y.—(AP)—President Roosevelt disclosed today he probably would appoint Robert Hinckley as assistant secretary of commerce. Mr. Roosevelt announced through a secretary, William D. Hassett, that he was considering the Hinckley appointment.

Hinckley, now chairman of the civil aeronautics authority, would succeed Monroe Johnson, who was named recently to the interstate commerce commission.

Week's Weather
Chicago—(AP)—Weather outlook for the week beginning Monday:

Great Lakes—Showers period first of week, and again toward end of week; considerably warmer in the main, but slightly cooler during middle of week.

Upper Mississippi valley—Showers Monday and again about Thursday and Friday; considerably warmer in the main, but somewhat cooler about Tuesday.

Also Report Heavy British Cruiser Lost Off Norway

Berlin Asserts Attack Took Place Near Namsos; Allies Retreat From All but
Northern Section of Norway

Stockholm—(AP)—Organized Norwegian resistance to the German invasion collapsed today in the face of an allied retreat from all but the northernmost section of Norway.

Alone and encircled, "with only ammunition for one day," the Norwegian central command asked Germany for an armistice, acknowledging the Nazis as masters of Norway and bitterly accusing the allies of "incomprehensible action in retreating without proper notice to the embattled Norwegian forces."

The fugitive Norwegian government, which alone has authority to sue for peace, formally was reported fleeing into the mountainous north country where British, French and Norwegian forces still are trying to dislodge a German contingent around Narvik, Arctic port.

Report Narvik Shelled
There were unsubstantiated reports that British fleet units were now engaged in a heavy bombardment of Narvik. It was reported also that the bombardment was covering the landing of some expert French Alpine light artillery units, who were charged with the task of eliminating high-perched machine-gun nests built by the Germans on the hills around Narvik.

It was indicated the allies were making an intensified drive to gain complete control of Narvik in the interests of establishing a base there.

(The French war ministry announced that the allies had surrounded a force of between 3,000 and 4,000 Germans at Narvik, and that the Germans' position was desperate.)

British Aims Obscure
Whereabouts of the British expeditionary force which sailed away from Namsos Thursday was unknown. Some credence was given by military observers to reports that at least part of the troops were to be landed farther north. The Norwegian telegraph agency seemed to bear this out with a terse statement that "evacuated allied troops have landed safely at other ports."

One British officer, just before the embarkation at Namsos, said the British were bound for England.

German domination of Norway left Sweden cut off from the western powers and apparently in line to fall under joint German-Soviet influence, particularly in trade matters, since Sweden now has no other outlets.

Woman Granted U. S.
Citizenship Through Congressional Action

Los Angeles—(AP)—A Canadian-born mother has her American citizenship today, four months after her worried, grieving husband committed suicide over her possible deportation.

The husband's suicide last New Year's day became known only after President Roosevelt signed a bill this week to legalize permanent residence in the United States for Mrs. Madeleine Vera Buchholz.

Mrs. Buchholz herself divulged the death of Fred W. Buchholz, 45, when reporters came to tell her of President Roosevelt's action.

"It doesn't mean much to me now," she said. Buchholz, she added, stabbed himself fatally Jan. 1 at an Orange county private sanitarium.

The bill to forestall Mrs. Buchholz deportation—six of her nine children also were born in Canada—was drafted after the American Legion and other organizations became aroused over the prospective break-up of the large family.

German Hold on Narvik Grows
Weaker Under Allied Land,
Sea Attacks, Refugees Assert

Stockholm—(AP)—Refugees arriving from Narvik said today that a long tunnel through the mountains and prevent their use for many months by the allies.

The arrival from Narvik pictured the general scene there as one of extreme desolation. Blocking the harbor are the wrecks of German destroyers and half-submerged ore ships. The long ore-loading pier which stretches far out into the fjord is badly damaged, and every part of the city, they said, shows the effect of the British bombardment.

The 123 British merchant seamen prisoners released by the Germans at Narvik, when there was no food to feed them, are now recovering at a Salvation Army post at Jorvik, north Sweden, after a grueling four-day trek through Arctic snows from Narvik to the Swedish border.

Many of these seamen said they were aboard British merchantmen in Narvik harbor during the first British attack on April 10, and that after reaching shore in lifeboats they had been taken prisoners by the Germans.

Berlin—(AP)—Germany officially reported today a British battleship and a heavy cruiser were sunk, one cruiser was damaged and one destroyer hit in heavy German air action yesterday off the Norwegian port of Namsos.

An official announcement said constant attacks by German warplanes, including dive bombers, were carried out on a British naval unit which had taken aboard allied troops withdrawn from the Namsos region.

The announcement also reported raids yesterday off Narvik, in the far north, stating that eight British warships and transports were sunk or badly damaged in the attacks there and at Namsos.

The broad claims of success for Germany's busy warplanes came early in the evening after the high command, in its regular daily communiqué, reported the sinking of a 30,000-ton battleship of the Queen Elizabeth class.

British officials declined comment on this claim.

The heavy cruiser also reported sunk was described as a vessel of "the York class."

(The York, a vessel of 8,250 tons, has a normal complement of 600 men. Its armament includes six eight-inch and four anti-aircraft guns. Naval handbooks list no "York class.")

Heavy bombs, the Germans announced, struck the cruiser on the quarter-deck and prow; fire broke out and there were numerous explosions; and the ship sank in 30 minutes.

The sinking was said by the German high command to have taken place off Namsos, the port from which the last British troops in central Norway re-embarked yesterday.

Authorized sources said that it was the first time since the beginning of the current war that German aircraft had been sent out with specific orders to keep after a designated battleship until it was sent to the bottom.

Adolf Hitler and Air Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering were represented as overjoyed at the news of this latest German success, which they were said to regard as equivalent to the defeat of an army.

5 Ships in Class
(The vessels of the Queen Elizabeth class represent an investment of approximately $34,000,000—about $12,000,000 at the rate of exchange prevailing during their construction between 1913-15.)

There are five battleships of this class and they normally carry a complement of 1,124 to 1,184 men. The Warspite, Queen Elizabeth and Valiant each total 30,000 tons, while the Bismarck and Mclayla displace 31,100 tons each.

Their main weapons are eight 15-inch guns.

The Warspite had a flotilla of destroyers under its command, and it is said to have sunk seven German destroyers.

Report Sub Sunk
It was announced also today that an enemy submarine had been sunk by a pursuing German U-boat after it had been sighted and bombed by a German reconnaissance plane. The location was not disclosed.

The high command said the battleship sinking actually took place yesterday but that it had withheld the news "in order to give Winston Churchill the first word of the British admiralty a chance to say it first."

When Churchill maintained silence the high command felt the information should be delayed no longer, it was said.

German authorities said that numerous hits were scored on the battleship during the attack, which the communiqué said was carried out by dive bombers, but it was thought that one bomb must have struck the magazine.

The alone, it was said, could have caused the flames which were reported to have shot up over 1,500 feet into the air.

21 Persons Killed in French Railroad Crash

Paris—(AP)—Twenty-one persons were killed and 25 others injured today when a local train crashed through a flood-weakened bridge near Vallon in Allier department.

The bridge gave way when the fourth coach of the train was crossing. The locomotive, baggage car and three passenger coaches left the rails.

Part-Time Classes Brought to Close

Members Organize Weyauwega Young Men's Agricultural Association

Weyauwega — The part-time school for young men living on farms in this locality who do not attend high school, which has been conducted by A. R. Kurtz, Smith-Hughes agriculture instructor at Weyauwega High school, during last winter and this spring has completed its season. The school is sponsored by the local agriculture department, given the out-of-school farm youth an opportunity to continue his education along vocational lines.

In addition to attending the weekly classes, the young men also carry out a supervised practice program which is directed toward improving the conditions on the home farm. The programs include soil improvement work, dairy herd improvement, better seed selection and development, shelter-belt planting and many other related agricultural activities.

In a series of 25 weekly meetings conducted since last fall, livestock sanitation measures were outlined, and along with this many other related problems were discussed. After the regular class meetings, a recreational hour was spent in the gym or the agriculture room of the high school. The period was spent in playing basketball, cards or other games.

At the final meeting the young men organized the Weyauwega Young Men's Agricultural association, electing the following officers: President, Everett Wilde; vice president, Roy D. Plowman; secretary and treasurer, Donald S. Well. The purpose of the organization is to promote a better and more profitable existence for the young men of the community at home and on the farms.

Clapper Flays Secret Vote to Kill Bill for Clean Politics

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—Even though there are large world questions troubling us, we should not let lesser things at home go to pot completely. For instance there is no reason why the handful of congressmen on the house judiciary committee should be allowed to get away with their secret scuttling of the Hatch state politics bill. It was a cheap, cowardly sneak act that reflects discredit upon congress. It involved some plain lying.

And it leaves a not very pleasing picture of the chairman of the house judiciary committee, Congressman Hutton W. Sumners. He has acquired a reputation as a kind of courageous old Roman who stepped out to denounce the supreme court bill when his colleagues lacked the nerve to speak. Only recently he was advocating the Walter-Logan bill to curb bureaucrats whom he charged with becoming arbitrary and high-handed.

Yet here is the second Hatch bill, which has passed the senate, and which seeks to apply to federally paid state employees the same restrictions upon political activity that were applied against federal employees in the first Hatch act. And what happens? Does the house get a chance to vote on it? No. The house judiciary committee decides to lay it on the table—that is, to kill it.

The committee does that by an unheard-of procedure—by a secret ballot in which no member reveals his vote even within the committee room. The vote was 14 to 10 for killing the bill. Yet after the vote, 15 members of the committee individually sought out Congressman J. J. Dempsey of New Mexico, sponsor of the measure in the house, and assured him that they had voted to save the Hatch bill. Several of those 15 were lying.

Chairman Acquiesced in Sneak Procedure

Chairman Sumners acquiesced in this sneak procedure. He has refused to state publicly his position on the bill. When the committee members assembled to vote, they were handed previously prepared slips of paper, each marked with "yes" and "no" so that the slip was torn in half and one end cast as a ballot. Members who have been in congress for years said they never had heard of such a secret committee vote, on any committee.

These committee members did not wish to have it as a matter of record that they had scuttled this clean-politics bill. They did not wish to face their constituents in such a position. Yet they don't want the law because it might cramp them in raising funds and lining up workers in the ranks of jobholders. Postmaster General Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, personally appealed to some members of the committee to kill the Hatch bill. The White House kept hands off and is understood to be in favor of the bill. But Speaker Bankhead and Democratic leader Rayburn are against it.

Defeated by these graveyard methods, Congressman Dempsey will try to obtain signatures to a petition that would bring the measure before the house. But he must obtain 218 signatures, a majority of the house. His chances are not good. Every member now has an easy opportunity to duck by declining to sign the petition. The house judiciary committee has taken everybody off the spot and, by doing it secretly, even the members of this committee have covered their tracks so that they cannot be called to account by an opponent in the coming election.

These are the gentlemen of the house judiciary committee: Democrats—Sumners, Tex.; Celler, N. Y.; Weaver, N. C.; Healey, Mass.; Walter, Pa.; McLaughlin, Neb. (absent); Hobbs, Ala.; Murdock, Utah; Tolson, Calif.; Creal, Ky.; Byrne, N. Y.; Massingale, Okla.; Satterfield, Va.; Barnes, Ill.; Gibbs, Ga.; Kefauver, Tenn.

Republicans: Guyer, Kas.; Hancock, N. Y.; Michener, Mich.; Robinson, Ky.; Reed, Ill.; Gwynne, Ia.; Graham, Pa.; Pierce, N. Y.; Monckiewicz, Conn.; Springer, Ind.

Some of these gentlemen may protest that they voted to save the Hatch act and that it is unfair to list them here. That's just too bad. They're all in the same boat, parties to a sneak job of legislative murder. If they want to clear themselves, they can tell it to the house which their committee has disgraced.

THE CAMPAIGN IN NORWAY

A blitzkrieg is a modern adaptation of the principle enunciated by the great Confederate cavalry leader, Forrest: "I git tar fustest with the mostest men."

The German invasion of Norway was not just a matter of sending some troops to land at some Norwegian ports. It was planned with the utmost precision and the participants trained like a football squad.

Part of this plan, no doubt, included an answer by the high command to this question: What ports will we leave to the enemy and why?

Thus the blitzkrieger not only has all the advantage of surprise and the selection of the best and easiest places to defend but may even select the places at which the enemy must land.

It is always to be anticipated that an autocratic form of government will gain great advantages at the beginning of every war. These are the advantages that accrue as the result of method, exactness, discipline and concentrated authority.

Gradually democracies will take over this lead but only in proportion as they follow the formulas employed by the autocrats.

There is no such thing in war as success against a powerful enemy unless the trappings of democracy, the long-winded speeches by the curbstone generals and all that sort of stuff, are abandoned.

In World war No. 1 Germany swept everything before it even more magnificently than so far in this war. But as freedom in democracies was displaced by discipline and determination the German advantages started thinning out.

War is a cold, dull and harsh piece of hell. And the sooner it is recognized by those who are in it for just what it is the more likely will they succeed.

WHERE A JURY STUMBLED

A man of 28 living in Indiana and working around a golf course destroyed the life of an 11-year-old girl after criminally assaulting her. The evidence was so overwhelming that the man confessed and entered a plea of insanity.

The jury has just disposed of the case. Its members said they gave no consideration whatever to the defendant's plea of insanity, found him guilty of murder in the first degree and then fixed his punishment at life imprisonment.

It is to be noted that while Indiana has the death penalty for first degree murder it has adopted that sleepy, loose-jointed, half-witted notion that a jury can fix a punishment more correctly than a court.

The man is a ferocious tiger. No one would think of again permitting him his freedom. Some modern sob sister probably got on the jury and hung out for a life sentence upon the ground that he— and sob sisters are often in male form—didn't want the feeling that he had been party to a death sentence.

The people of Indiana have provided the death sentence, presumably to be employed in the most extreme cases. And yet in this case that fairly screamed for the supreme penalty the jury flopped.

Excepting in federal courts where the jurors seem to be chosen with particular care for their intelligence and stability, the average jury verdict in respect to fixing punishment for these jungle animals has not been anything to make the country swell with pride.

To remember with pity the brute before them and to forget with haste the broken body of the frail child in its grave—such is too often a picture of American justice.

A BATTLE IN THE SOUTH

Southern gentlemen have a reputation for spirit and courage in personal combat that has lagged despairingly of late. But on Thursday the governor of Mississippi and an editor who was obnoxious to him began swinging haymakers and things seemed natural again.

It is not easy to say whether the South's reputation for toughness has been modified by a long course of conduct of her people or whether in this morose and spiritless age only men have been elected to office who were too inert and too doggone tired to swing a left uppercut at someone who was wagging his jaw a bit too much.

The public in Mississippi will pass judgment upon the quarrel depending upon the facts. A man seldom loses case when he loses temper in a good cause. When Haynes attacked Senator Charles Sumner in antebellum days and struck him down in the senate with a gold-headed cane he lost caste even among his own people. There isn't anything to be gained when a younger man strikes an older with a weapon.

But if it turns out that the Mississippi governor had held his temper under most annoying circumstances and avoided the clash in every decent manner he will probably be cheered and his political stock will soar for having attacked his adversary.

And yet as fights go one could really have as much fun if he followed the Dickens prescription where Mr. Tupman in angry voice declared, "Sir, you're a fellow" and Mr. Pickwick responded, "Sir, you're another."

THE CARDENAS DOCTRINE

The theft of a few chicle fields or oil wells is of relatively little importance but the abolition of an existing principle in world affairs and the creation of another rule to take its place may be of far-reaching effect.

The way the Mexicans put the principle for which they now contend is with the rude expression, "nationality lacks extraterritoriality." Its essence is that whenever a citizen of one country enters another, whether at that other's invitation or not, but for the purpose of commercial enterprise, and succeeds in his endeavors he loses all rights to his original citizenship back in the country from whence he came and becomes for all purposes a citizen of the country into which he has moved and, therefore, amenable to all its laws and without the right to cry to his own government that he is being shamefully robbed or mistreated.

A well known writer in the current issue of the American Journal of International Law discusses this proposition and its implications as follows:

"If foreigners engaged in normal international trade and intercourse should automatically lose their nationality and citizenship on crossing the borders of another nation; should be deprived of the fruits of their labor and thrift; should be denied all diplomatic assistance and become subject to the vagaries of local jurisdiction, without the right to appeal to universal standards of right and justice, then there certainly would be no reason for a law of nations. Each sovereign nation would be supreme, subject to no superior considerations or restraints. This, of course, could only result in international anarchy, a return to the barbarism of warring tribes in the heart of Africa."

Whether all these conclusions are accurate is beside the point because the Cardenas doctrine is the child of fraud, and a rule to govern international relations which is actually the creation of fraud will likely carry its stench, and with that odor its paralyzing effect, far beyond any immediate example one may have in mind.

Every nation such as Mexico has a perfect right and all kinds of power to protect itself from the financial pirate or the international exploiter. It may pass laws today affecting the entire future prohibiting anyone but a Mexican citizen from owning property, or limiting the amount of property an alien may own. Bermuda has done so. Mexico may pass laws putting a heavier burden of taxation upon aliens if it pleases. Thus, if the aliens are too smart for the Mexicans, it may dull that keenness by taking the profits.

One may ask boldly why Mexico doesn't do these things if it wants "Mexico for Mexicans." And the answer is that Mexico wants to commit fraud. It wants foreign capital. If it advises foreigners in advance that it will confiscate their property what chance has it got to obtain their investments? If the foreigners see a system of laws that cuts their profits to the bone, that makes them absorb all losses but give most of the profits to the government, they will no more venture into Mexico than they will deliberately take any other barren course.

Mexico, in short, wants to hold out the old lure, obtain the investments of millions of dollars of American capital, watch the development of business, industry and agriculture under the spur of American energy and resourcefulness, and then grab everything and tell those who have produced the results, "You are virtually a Mexican and it is therefore the inherent right of the government to beat and rob you."

It demands the impossible. It wishes to live the lazy, shiftless, languorous life. But it wants to have the fruits that only grow on the tree of energy.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

SWINGING ON THE GATE

Years ago when the picket fences
Ran around every house we knew,
Pretty girls used to stir our senses,
Walking out in the twilight blue,
Rose was one who would wander daily
Out to the fence where she would wait
For the lad who would join her gaily
Swinging, swinging upon the gate!

Every flower in the garden scented
The Spring world in that sunset hour,
There was the velvet lawn undented
By her footprint. Just like a flower
Rose stood swaying beside her lover,
With no questioning of her fate.
She would follow the whole world over,
Swinging, swinging upon the gate!

Billowy petticoats aflutter,
Leghorn hat with its streamers flying!
She was looking at him with utter
Faith that his love would be undying!
And through a thousand evenings falling,
Rose would remember her darling mate,
Standing beside her, while life was calling,
Swinging, swinging upon the gate!

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN
Washington—Cordell Hull, for the most part, is a patient man. But on occasion, when an old newspaper friend has walked into his office, the secretary of state has loosed a torrent of Tennessee vituperation against these "Brain Trusters" who tell him how to run his state department.

And the "Brain Trusters" Mr. Hull has in mind are not the proverbial pair of Corcoran and Cohen, but only one man—the ineffable, inexplicable, irrepressible Adolf Augustus Berle, Jr.

The ineffable Adolf possesses a paradoxical capacity for getting in Mr. Hull's hair, while at the same time Mr. Hull leans on his assistant secretary of state as one of the most important members of the state department.

This is the key to Berle's weird make-up. People don't like him, but they can't get along without him.

LATE FOR DINNER

His capacity for offending is unsurpassed in a city where snobbery is one of the accomplished arts.

Arriving at the Yugoslav Legation one night very late for dinner, the ineffable Adolf announced: "I have just been to a very important White House conference."

And yet Adolf can be the height of charm and graciousness, just as he can be the height of usefulness to Cordell Hull. He writes some of Hull's most effective speeches, helps frame some of the most important United States foreign policy, and as aide to Mayor LaGuardia, helped to revitalize the finances of New York. Also he authored section 77B of the bankruptcy act, helped reorganize the New York savings banks during the 1932 depression, and wrote a book on the obligation of corporations to their investors which helped lay the foundation for the securities and exchange act.

Probably one reason the ineffable Adolf sometimes gets on the nerves of Secretary Hull is that he has been trying to steer Mr. Hull's political path toward the presidency. And Mr. Hull, who considers himself (with some justice) one of the shrewdest politicians ever bred in the hills of Tennessee, thinks that he is completely capable of steering his own course.

The other man whom Adolf is trying to put across to the American public (as vice president) is none other than Fiorello LaGuardia, who, it is generally agreed, is just about the most skillful putter-across-of-himself in these United States—except perhaps for Franklin Roosevelt. LaGuardia, however, does not resent Berle's solicitude. In fact, the two are intimate friends, and worked closely together when Berle, as Chamberlain of New York, pulled the city's bond values from 82 to 117.

CHILD PRODIGY

General Hugh Johnson is credited with the remark: "Berle was a child prodigy. Now he is no longer a prodigy."

At any rate, Adolf graduated from Harvard at 18—an age when many youngsters are just entering. He had been reared in the intellectual home of a Congregational minister by a father who had fought to clean up the banking system of Massachusetts, and whose motto was, "Despise all, the truth impudently!"

Berle's father, now 74 years old, has had considerable influence on his life. So also has his wife.

Berle, who is now 45, did not marry until he was 32, and when he did, he picked out Beatrice Bend Bishop, a woman of equal brilliance—plus several million dollars.

Mrs. Berle was almost disowned by her family when they discovered she had fallen in love with a young man who actually had lived in a tenement house district and shunned Back Bay society. So when the wedding day rolled around, it was Henry P. Fletcher, ex-chairman of the Republican National committee and uncle of Mrs. Berle, who conducted her to the altar.

DR. BEATRICE BERLE
Mrs. Berle is a remarkable woman. A doctor of medicine, she is a practicing physician, and spends part of her time at Gallinger hospital, the government-supported institution for Washington's poorer citizens. She also spends several hours a day tutoring her own children, leads so busy a life that New York rumor once had it that the Berle had twin tubs installed in their bathroom, because that was the only way they could find fifteen minutes to talk to each other.

Mrs. Berle's greatest passion in life is children—and she doesn't care much whose children. Arriving in Buenos Aires for the 1936 Pan-American Conference, Mrs. Berle was entertained at the prime and palatial estate of Ambassador Weddell. Looking out over its gardens, Mrs. Berle left her hostess agast with the remark:

"Oh, this is such a lovely garden. We must have a children's party immediately. I'm going to invite about twenty children."

Berle is an original Brain Trustee and first came to know Roosevelt when FDR was still Governor of New York, and Adolf still teaching at Columbia. It was three Columbia professors—Moley, Tugwell and Berle—who formed the nucleus of the first Brain Trust, and of these, the sole survivor is Berle.

NO PRIVATE LIFE
Paradoxically, Berle was first appointed assistant secretary of state in order to handle press relations—a job for which no one could have been more suited. For like Rex Tugwell, Adolf hates publicity, yet the public spotlight seems to follow him unceasingly.

"I suppose the price of working for the government is to have one's private life explored," he says, "but I think it need not extend beyond the individual to his family, to have them thrown in the jackpot as well."

Berle has now settled down into a special groove in the state department, where he doesn't have to worry about press relations. He has had a finger in the Hitler scoldings, the sending of an envoy to the Vatican, and especially in the efforts to keep Italy neutral. He also does a lot of backstage speech writing and economic research for Roosevelt, and probably sees more of the president than Mr. Hull himself.

No matter what his failings, the ineffable Adolf will always be remembered by the diplomatic corps for one remark he made when Poland was invaded.

"The difficulty with Europe," remarked a foreign ambassador to Berle, "is that this war will lead to world revolution."

To which Berle replied: "Mr. Ambassador, this is the world revolution."

Opinions of Others

POWER FROM SOYA BEANS
Hallett Abend reported from Shanghai the other day that the Germans are shipping to Chungking a new kind of automotive Diesel engine which uses 88 per cent soya bean oil and only 12 per cent gasoline. Engineers know that peanut oil, olive oil, palm oil, vegetable oil will drive a Diesel. To make the oil flow, some light oil must be added. Hence the gasoline. Kerosene would be just as good and cheaper.

It is not likely, however, that this German activity will deal a blow to American gasoline sales in China. There is no reason why we should not sell Diesel driven trucks and also the gasoline or kerosene needed to "cut" the sticky oil. Why don't we drive our own trucks with soya bean oil? Because it is too expensive.—New York Times.

A Bystander In Washington

BY JACK STINNETT

Washington—Uncle Sam's getting testy about his military secrets these days, even to the extent of barring foreign military attaches stationed in Washington from the United States Army's sham war ground in Louisiana and Texas.

The official reason why gold embossed invitations are NOT going out to gold-braided, eagle-eyed observers of foreign governments is because there will be "insufficient accommodation."

Insufficient accommodation, my eye.

The truth is that a military attaché whatever country he is serving—and that means us, too—is oftentimes a glorified, if LEGAL, spy. It's part of his job to ferret out facts without appearing to do so.

For instance, our military attaches in Poland gathered much material and information about blitzkrieg last year.

For in Poland a modern war machine was in action against a more or less old style army. What did it do? Did it bog down anywhere? Did it leak blood or gasoline?

One thing they determined was that the German machine did not encounter any wet going. That's important. That's the one thing a modern blitzkrieg hasn't yet met—wet going.

We'll Try Swamp War
So it is significant that our May maneuvers are being held in swamp country in the spring. Uncle Sam's army is going to find out without benefit of foreign visitors.

Of course, the visiting military and naval attaches never violate etiquette by going into forbidden zones. Wherever they go, they go by invitation. But they have been known to show up ahead of time, before secret gear could be stowed away. A mistake. Misread the invitation, etc.

These attaches often use their wits far away from military zones. For instance, one of the best of our military secrets leaked out a few years ago when foreign attaches viewed the movie, "Hell Divers."

Even though a naval censor had blacked out the landing deck of an aircraft carrier appearing in the picture, the attaches saw enough to guess Uncle Sam was miles ahead of other nations in taking off and landing planes from carriers.

It was only a matter of weeks until British aircraft carriers had hydraulic machinery and tripping cables on the deck of their aircraft carriers.

And I hope I'm not going too far, when I disclose the fact that it was again a matter of weeks until Uncle Sam's own naval attaches aboard a British carrier on parade day, discovered a British refinement of our tripping device.

Our navy had taken all its hydraulic apparatus off the landing decks of our carriers and fastened it to the side of the vessel, out of the way.

So it is not surprising to discover that Captain Robert M. Losey of the United States army was standing in a tunnel mouth observing military aviation in Norway when he was killed recently.

Captain Losey was sent to Dombe, Norway, to help take out American women and children. But he also had his eye peeled for military news worthy of the attention of Washington. American military attaches have a world wide reputation for seeing well.

And so it is that Uncle Sam figures that the military attaches of other nations may be able to see well, too. He doesn't want them to see our 50 calibre machine gun down in Louisiana. And a few other little devices.

And so he's getting testy. Of course, there's plenty of room for any American Tom, Dick, or Harry. But the accommodations are simply not Waldorf-enough for distinguished foreign visitors.

Just a Step Behind the News
By Dave Boone

I guess about the last thing a neutral will do from now on is to yell "help." No matter on how tough a spot she may be she will probably respond to any offer of aid with a cry of "I'm all right. Whatever you do don't come to my assistance."

Can you imagine a hard-pressed Norwegian's reaction to Mr. Chamberlain's statement that a British and French fleet is on the way to Alexandria? It's like being in a blazing house in Chicago and getting a phone call saying that the hose wagon is hurrying to Penobscot, Maine.

But here's the truth in what Chamberlain says. The Nazis got into a helpless neutral land first by treachery, ruthlessness and complete disregard for the right of small nations. The British fighters were up against terrific odds from the first. But Hitler didn't have his customary walkover.

Winston Churchill has got to do some tall word-eating. Remember his radio declaration, "We will sink every enemy ship in the Skagerrak and Kattegat?"

However, long-range strategy, as Neville says, will win this war and nobody can forget that England has always lost plenty of battles and still won her wars. She never is more dangerous than when she has been thrown downstairs, kicked around the alley and left for the sweepers.

FOUND: GRAVY
Memphis, Tenn.—(AP)—Every silver lining can have its dark cloud. J. M. Walker's telephone rang.

"Jim, we've got $150 of your money on deposit," a bank's teller said. "It's been here 22 years."

Walker didn't remember it. But he got the money, spent it.

The sad part was that the account was non-interest bearing.

"OOH, ADOLF—ARE THEY REALLY MINE!"

Under the CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
Madison—Hints of difficulties between Governor Julius P. Heil and his press secretary, Arthur Tiller, were reported here a few days ago. Yesterday Tiller suddenly handed Heil his resignation, and today the governor is ostensibly looking for a new man to fill a job which in a campaign year becomes of extreme importance to a candidate for office, which Heil now is by his own announcement.

Any Capitol reporter who may venture to discuss the causes and the background of Tiller's action—the first direct evidence of any clashes in the inner circle of the administration—is putting himself in a peculiar position and running the danger of appearing partisan.

For most of the men who cover the Capitol for the state press, men of all political faiths, will agree that Heil made a mistake in letting Tiller go.

BACKGROUND
Tiller's departure from the staff of the governor's office is important because it causes reveal an aspect of Governor Heil's character which is not generally known to the public, although most Republican politicians who are acquainted with the chief executive will testify to it.

The governor is undoubtedly unaware of the frequency with which he has said, at various meetings and on various occasions: "If I could only run this Capitol as I run my plant," or "this is a democracy, and I can't always do things as I am used to doing them."

Heil is an autocrat by temperament, environment, and training, a fact which has accounted for most of his political difficulties in his year and a half of office.

He demands obedience from those around him, and is constantly being annoyed by those who would presume to contradict him, despite the fact that those latter may be trying to advise him out of their experiences on problems or in fields with which Heil himself is unacquainted.

"I am the executive head of this state," is one of his favorite phrases.

THE CAUSE
He demonstrably knows all there is to know about making dump trucks and oil burners. His business ability won him a considerable private fortune. Presumably he knows how to run the state government to the satisfaction of the people of Wisconsin.

There is no evidence, however, that he knows anything about political press-agency, an invaluable and universal instrument of modern politics.

Tiller does. Over a period of 20 years of work on some of the best newspaper and publicity jobs in the state, he has accumulated a skill, an acquaintance with politicians and newspapermen, and a background of political lore, which persuaded scores of influential supporters of the governor to recommend him for an appointment to Heil's staff in January of 1939.

Since that time, however, Capitol reporters have known that Tiller's job was difficult. Heil found fault with Tiller's writing style, a style developed on one of the biggest newspapers in the country, insisted on rewriting releases for the press. He vetoed ideas for publicity, and complained because Tiller was unable to halt the increasing amount of press criticism of his speeches and actions. Upon the governor's return from Miami, he wanted to know why the papers hadn't reported the reorganization of the tax commission, and when Tiller pulled out a huge bundle of clippings to show that he had been treated ful-

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

CHANGE OF MEDICINE

Lucius A. Seneca, as early as 40 A. D., recorded his opinion that nothing hinders a cure so much as frequent change of medicine. Perhaps that was true in Seneca's day. Nowadays most medicine is fairly safe, that is, if prescribed or administered by the physician, and a change of medicine, when indicated by the progress of the malady under treatment, involves no additional hazard.

Reference books of quotations do not credit the common saying, "Come on, take your medicine" to any one in particular. I wonder whether the familiar slang expression "He can take it" refers to medicine or mere adversity in general.

Trying it on the dog is another familiar expression of obscure origin. As a sophomore medical student I began trying things on the dog and found the experimental studies helpful until we took up cannabins indica, Indian hemp, later notorious as marihuana. The textbook on therapeutics said no death from the use of cannabins indica was on record, and that it had the peculiar effect of causing the two hemispheres of the cerebrum to think differently on the same subject. That intrigued me, and I mean intrigued, so one Sunday afternoon when I was studying therapeutics I took a fairly large dose of fluidextract of cannabins indica, just to see. Nothing happened for a considerable time, but finally I began to feel uneasy and confused, the fearful that mine might prove the first case of fatal poisoning on record. I tried to look up an antidote but seemed incapable to do so. This wretched state probably lasted less than an hour, but it seemed much longer. At last I was—satisfied as they say in England, ill as the squeamish say in this country, in short, I had no further use for or interest in the drug.

So far as the two cerebral hemispheres thinking differently on the same subject may be concerned, I doubt that any physiologist or psychologist entertains that theory today. The nerve center for the control of speech is situated in the left side of the cerebrum, under the temple region, in right-handed persons; in left-handed persons. Cerebral hemorrhage into the lower frontal region of the left hemisphere of a right-handed person therefore produces paralysis of the right side of the body and, often, impairment or loss of the speech faculty; but such injury in the right side of the brain of the right-handed person produces paralysis of the left arm or leg or both, but not of speech.

The nerve center for vision is in the occipital lobe of the cerebrum at the back of the head. Destruction of the center in the right lobe causes blindness in the left half of the field of vision of both eyes; destruction of the left lobe causes blindness of the right half of the field of vision of both eyes.

I had had a mind to reveal the location of the center of thought today, but on reflection I have decided to leave that to the physiologists and psychologists of the future.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Home Use of Quinine
We were much interested in your recent article on the use of quinine and wonder whether you have any printed copies available for readers, or anything on the subject of the use of quinine as a remedy.

somely, he ordered another long release prepared detailing it again.

This week, after another argument, Tiller packed up his personal files, wrote a letter of resignation, and went home.

Among passengers on board the ill-fated Lusitania four years previous was the Rev. Mr. Van Nest-Burton of Kimberly. He said the boat was a veritable castle on the sea and a masterpiece in the art of modern steamship making.

10 YEARS AGO
Saturday, May 3, 1930
The New York Stock market was depressed by a fresh landslide of selling that day and suffered severe losses comparable to those of the previous day. A total of 4,800,000 shares were traded, the largest number on record for a 2-hour Saturday session. Trading was the largest volume since the dark days of the previous November.

According to preliminary census figures compiled by F. J. Jonet, Green Bay census supervisor for this district, the village of Little Chute had increased in population almost 40 per cent since 1920. In the 1930 census, the population was found to be 2,833 as compared with 2,017 in 1920.

25 YEARS AGO
Saturday, May 8, 1915
With a total of 703 saved, the admiralty had announced that the list of survivors of the Lusitania would be regarded as closed. The number of dead was 1,457. The United States government was to direct Ambassador Gerard to make an inquiry of the German government for its report concerning the sinking of the British liner. It was reported the ship was torpedoed without warning by a German submarine.

The British steamer Transylvania for Liverpool sailed late Friday for Liverpool after news of the Lusitania's sinking had been received. The Transylvania's cabins were crowded, its agents said.

Among passengers on board the ill-fated Lusitania four years previous was the Rev. Mr. Van Nest-Burton of Kimberly. He said the boat was a veritable castle on the sea and a masterpiece in the art of modern steamship making.

Rap Choice of New Chief at Mass Meeting

Neenah Citizens Jam City Hall for Pro-test Session

START PETITION

Speakers Laud Stulp but Want Sorensen to Get Appointment

Neenah—The support of hundreds of Neenah people, crowded into every available space in the city hall auditorium for a citizens' meeting last night, gave impetus to a mass movement demanding that the board of police and fire commissioners rescind its appointment of Irving Stulp, Neenah, captain of the Winnebago county police force, as chief of the Neenah police department and that Assistant Chief Vego Sorensen be appointed to that office.

The purpose of the meeting, which was called by a citizens' committee, was to demand an appointment of Captain Stulp instead of Assistant Chief Sorensen to succeed Chief C. H. Watts, resigned.

Only one member of the board, Frank Klinka, appeared at the meeting, and more than 12 persons, mainly business men and city officials, addressed the packed auditorium.

At the session, the citizens' committee started the circulation of a petition, aiming at an unprecedented number of signers, 5,000 to 7,000.

The petition read: "We, the undersigned, demand that the board of police and fire commissioners of the city of Neenah rescind its recent appointment of chief of police and that Assistant Chief Vego Sorensen be appointed to that office."

Mayor Speaks
Mayor Edwin A. Kalfahs was the first speaker. He said:

"My views were stated clearly at a meeting of the council Wednesday night, but there are facts in connection with this matter that should be explained."

He pointed out that the commission has the authority to elect the chief of police and that the council or the mayor has nothing to do with the matter.

"I've heard the remark that the council should fire one or more members of the commission. That can't be done. It is contrary to the laws of the state. Likewise, if a commissioner resigns, it doesn't change the result. To reconsider the matter requires a majority vote of the council."

The mayor advised that the meeting proceed in an orderly manner and that both sides be given an opportunity to be heard. "And after this is definitely and finally settled, bury the hatchet and go forward in the American way."

Alderman Knud Larsen stated: "I spoke my piece at the council meeting and it still holds. Stulp is a wonderful man, and he would make a wonderful chief, but that doesn't put Sorensen in a bad position. Sorensen has worked hard and done his best for the city, and when the commission picks a local man in preference to Mr. Sorensen, that's rotten."

Hopes for Results
"I hope this meeting will have a bearing on the matter, and when these petitions are presented to the commission, and if the commission doesn't consider them, then there's something rotten and not only in Denmark."

William Draheim, a member of the citizens' committee, said, when asked by Paul Kalfahs, who presided at the meeting:

"Before Chief Watts tendered his resignation, I approached the chairman of the commission and pleaded for Vego Sorensen. It was received in a peculiar fashion by Mr. Hatten and there certainly wasn't an encouragement."

"When the resignation announcement was made, I prepared a letter of recommendation to the commission, and it was signed by 80 to 100 business men. Only two refused to sign it. One of the commissioners today said that I signed it against their will. I used no coercion or high pressure. The petition is the American way of doing business, and there were between 400 and 500 names signed to letters which were presented to the commission recommending Sorensen as chief. We made a mistake, we should have had 5,000 names, and we'll get them."

Outlines Procedure
Draheim then outlined the procedure of getting 5,000 to 7,000 signatures on the printed petitions.

William Campbell, former Neenah mayor, said that there should have been a promotion within the department, explaining that Sorensen should at least have been given the office on probation for six months or a year, and if he showed he wasn't qualified, then would be the time to get a man from outside the force.

"An injustice has been done," Alderman John Heigl said. He pointed out that the commission should have realized its obligation to the city, and that Neenah is the largest taxpayer according to population ratio. Stulp has started a wonderful thing in the county, he stated and should be kept there to continue his good work. Heigl said that the commission should rescind its decision and give Sorensen an opportunity to prove his ability on a probationary basis, if necessary.

"I'm sure he'll make good, for he certainly has the support of the citizens of the community."

Alderman Robert Martens advised the audience that in a friendly way so they'll rescind their action. He complimented the department, and said he was disappointed at the appointment.

Suggests Refusal
Cornelius J. Quinn, another member of the committee, told the audience that there is "Public indignation over an injustice done to a public servant. Stulp's qualifications can't be questioned. He's a good officer and a good man. It is said, 'heroes are born and not made, but Stulp can make himself if he had the plain, good American guts to say 'I refuse the appointment.'"

Martin Potratz said that "The people should fight this when a few can use their influence and the wishes of the majority are overlooked."

Rev. Walter G. Wittenborn, pastor of the First Fundamental church, said he was glad of the cooperation of the people for Sorensen. He said Stulp is a great man but that the city needs him as much as the county. "The commission hasn't made clear why they chose Stulp. If he has the courage, Stulp will refuse the appointment. Maybe he will. I think he should," the pastor said.

Paul Kalfahs told the audience that the commissioners wouldn't attend the meeting except Frank Klinka. Klinka then was introduced and was applauded by the audience.

Quinn spoke again, stating that "After the committee met this morning with members of the commission, 90 per cent of the people signed the petition, it would get no consideration at all. All we can do is express ourselves, but not one of them would pay any attention to it. I never saw a man who had to get out of town so quick in my life."

Draheim answered Quinn with "A party once swayed by one means may be swayed by other means."

Commissioner Talks
Klinka then was called upon to talk, and he said: "I have the highest regard for Stulp. He is a friend of mine and I'm his friend. But I believed all along in promotion within the department, especially when the man has so much experience, good character and abilities. I'm not alone in fighting for Sorensen. I did the best I could. If we had to go outside to pick a man, we couldn't do better than Stulp."

At the outset of the meeting, Paul Kalfahs told the audience that there are "No questions as to the qualifications of the man appointed to the office, but we would like to know why the assistant chief didn't have enough qualifications for the office."

He further asked, "Why were the wishes of the people ignored by the commission? What is the future of a young man who joins the department if there are no promotions within it? Is there a private business in this city in which an employee can't advance?"

Kalfahs said that the committee wants to know "Why Sorensen's qualifications weren't satisfactory to the commission and why petitions, the fundamental basis of our government, weren't considered."

Four Companies to Share in County's Road Oil Business
Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau Oshkosh—Contracts for 200,000 gallons of road oil were awarded yesterday afternoon by the county highway committee to four companies, each getting an equal share. The cost of the road oil will be $9.30, or .0465 cents a gallon.

The companies awarded the contracts were the Standard Oil company, the South Oil company, representing Texaco; the R. E. Kartback company, jobbers handling Shell Oil; and the Cook and Brown Lime company of Oshkosh, representing the American-Mexican Oil company.

The highway committee also voted to terminate their agreements with the town governments whereby the county took over maintenance of town roads. This move was at the suggestion of District Attorney Lewis C. Magnusen who pointed out that a recent state law made the county liable for any injuries or damages occurring on town roads due to insufficiency or want of repairs, which roads the county had agreed to maintain. The highway committee will allow the town governments to rent the county's equipment.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

ROWING POSITION No. 1

ROWING POSITION No. 2

If you want to streamline your figure you must strengthen your weakest muscles and weaken your overdeveloped muscles. Bulges are usually caused by overdeveloped muscles particularly those in the thighs and hips, so you must adopt an exercise routine which will correct this trouble.

Arrange a folded blanket on the floor to accommodate your stretched-out figure. You may put a small pillow under your head—a very thin one. Now learn these exercises in rotation and go through them every single morning in a room well aired.

Reducing Routine

1—First relax by lying on the floor and bending your knees so the soles of your feet are flat on the floor. Cross your arms on your chest and then pretend you are going to sleep for ten minutes. Unless you are thoroughly relaxed before beginning this program the exercising will do you no good.

2—Get your legs working freely in the thigh sockets by going through the "bicycle" movement. This is done by lifting first one leg and then the other in an up-side-down pedaling movement. Pedal in big circles making sure that the inner borders of your knees touch as your legs pass each other. Your knees should just graze. When you are out of breath, relax. Repeat for five minutes.

3—And now for those prominent curves in your back hips. Lie on your back, bend your knees up to

Bidding May Indicate Lie Of Key Cards

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Lucky is the dealer who has been given such explicit information by the opponents' bidding that he has what amounts to a blueprint of their respective holdings. South, in today's hand, was able to plan his play on virtually a double-dummy basis, as the he could see all 52 cards.

South, dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	2 diamonds	2 hearts	Pass
4 hearts	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Redouble	Pass

West's vulnerable overall was the sort of bid that never will get a bouquet from me. True, he had a seven card suit, but with this suit a minor and missing the three top honors, and with no great strength outside, I fail to see what West expected to gain by making any bid. Did he hope to reach game? Was he making a vulnerable "interference bid" against nonvulnerable opponents? The real answer, I imagine, is that West merely saw a "flock" of diamonds in his hand, and bid 'em!

South's jump to game, with only a four card trump suit and after only a single raise from his partner, was somewhat questionable, but not to be condemned considering his four-plus honor tricks and the solidity of his trump suit. North's redouble was based on the fact that his single raise had been sound as a bell.

West, feeling that his best chance to help defeat the redoubled contract was to get a spade ruff, opened the ace of spades and continued with the deuce. Dummy and East played low, and declarer's 10 held the second trick. Declarer now carefully considered the situation.

West's vulnerable overall at the two level obviously had been predicated on a long suit, probably seven cards. East was marked with long trumps for his penalty double, but certainly would not have doubled on nothing but trumps. He must have the club ace, as well.

At the third trick, declarer cashed the heart king, to draw what he felt sure was a singleton trump from West. He then cashed the spade king and, when West failed to ruff, the accuracy of declarer's diagnosis was partly revealed. Now the diamond ace was cashed, after which South's low diamond was carefully ruffed with the ace of hearts. East did the best he could by discarding his spade jack. The spade queen then was led and, when East ruffed, declarer shrewdly discarded a losing club. (It would have done East no good to have refused to ruff the spade queen.) Now, East could make no return to defeat the contract. He properly exited with a trump. Declarer won, drew all the trumps, and cashed his two good diamonds for the fulfilling tricks.

The mothers know what a good teacher means to their children and to them, and they would not have it so.

But most mothers have all they can do to attend to the children at home. They have no time to study the problems that this matter involves. They leave that to the Boards and the Politicians who infest those Boards. Some day soon, I hope, mothers will find the time to learn the inner workings of their schools. Then teachers will come into their own, and the schools will be Schools, not buildings.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

To remove tea stains from linens moisten them with cold water and the real teacher, but the Jack of cover them with borax. Let the linens stand 20 minutes or so, then what the community wash pour a kettle of boiling water to do? If the fathers and mothers through the stain, holding the ket, were directly concerned with the stain, the stain disappears. The school's teacher would not be. This process may be used to remove overlooked stains as is so often the case, fruit stains.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

Today I wish to make a plea for the dentist and physicians, policemen and nurses. If you tactfully train your child, he will react much like David in today's Case Record. But if you don't, he'll cause consternation and a violent scene every time you take him to one of us.

CASE Q-154: David, aged 3, is our youngest child.

Yesterday he fell off his chair at the dinner table and struck his head on the floor. Judging from the force of the thump, we expected him to come up crying.

But he jumped up, beaming and exclaimed:

"My no cry! My big boy! My soldier!"

We reassured him that he certainly was a big boy and brave, like a soldier.

DIAGNOSIS:

David's case has been cited today to show that pain is largely a relative matter.

Babies cry for all sorts of major and minor causes. They soon learn to shriek lustily for attention at growing appetite for prestige and social recognition.

Hungers Of The Brain

I have previously mentioned that we have a few organs which give rise to corresponding hungers. The stomach is the basis for a food hunger, and our sex glands give rise to love hunger.

If we had to be equipped with an organ to warrant every separate hunger, however, we would be larger than a mountain. Fortunately, the brain is a billion-in-one organ.

By developing certain nerve pathways in the brain, called habits, we find a hunger for music or art or religion or reading, etc. David shows that his brain is now the organ of his hunger for social approval.

So he omits his babyhood wailing when he bumps his head, and proudly tells us he is a soldier. This is a laudable turn of events.

How To Help The Doctor

If you parents want to help us doctors a great deal, please build up this reaction in your youngsters. It is inevitable that they will need to have their teeth filled or receive an occasional needle prick, as at the time of vaccination or inoculation against diphtheria.

Instead of confronting the physician or dentist with a shrieking, terrified youngster, please help us by educating your child to take pride in being stoical.

Praise his refraining from crying. Tell him it is a sign that he is growing big, like his daddy. Tell him it shows he is a soldier. Read him tales of bravery on the part of early pioneers and Indians.

Then, if your child still puts on a scene at the doctor's office, please leave the room and let us handle the child alone. He will usually cooperate readily with the doctor, though the presence of his mother will elicit an entire repertoire of sympathy evoking howls.

And don't excuse your child to look upon dentists and physicians, policemen and nurses as terrifying or dreaded individuals. They are good friends of children, so they should be presented accordingly.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope and a dime to cover typing or printing costs. When you seek original copies or one of his psychological charts.)

LEAP BEFORE YOU LOOK

By Peggy O'More

YESTERDAY: The Toland tribe takes over the house and drives Tomi to distraction. Just as she is thanking her lucky stars that the time limit is nearly up, Harold falls sick.

Chapter 23
Quarantined!

"Call Dr. Tillman," advised Abe, without interest.

"But, Abe, do you know him? Is he good?" Does he know his business?"

Abe, whose gentle nature had been marinated in Tolands until it had turned acid, swung on Tomi.

"Do I know Tillman? Is he good? Does he know his business? His voice went up in crescendo. "See this arm?"

He rolled up his sleeve. "It was broke. He set it. It's as good as new. See this leg?" Up went a trouser leg. "Double fracture. He set it. It's as good as new."

"Now, Abe," warned Tomi, as Abe's hand went to his neck. "don't tell me you broke your neck and he set that."

"But I did have a carbuncle, and..."

"I know," cried Tomi, hysterically. "It's as good as new." And she headed for the door to confront the excited family.

"I'm calling a Doctor Tillman," she told them as she thumbed madly through the telephone book. "Abe had him and now Abe's as good as new. Operator, Alameda-01122."

"Doctor Tillman? I'm so glad you're in—"

"Tomi!" Great-aunt Hannah's voice arose above the babble of other voices.

"My little cousin is very ill," Tomi was saying.

"Tomi!" Great-aunt Hannah bore down on her. "We don't want him looking like Abe."

"And we don't want him looking like Abe," repeated Tomi obediently. Then, realizing what she had said, cried, "Will you shut up!"

"No, Doctor. I was not telling you to shut up. I was talking to my aunt. No, she isn't my cousin's mother but he lives with her. Where?" Tomi waved frantically for silence. "You really want the address? Well, it's 11137 Jackson Drive, Chicago."

"Oh, no." She was near tears. "Why did the family tattle her so?"

"They are here, visiting me. On Bay Farm Island. Do you know Allen Bartlett's cottage? No, that isn't it. It's the old farmhouse next door."

"What did you say?" She clapped one hand over her exposed ear. "Did he break anything?" Only some crockery, a jardiniere and three candle-sticks. No, of course you can't do anything about that. I don't expect you to. He's just read all over and he sees little pink frogs."

"Delirium what? No, he hasn't been drinking. He's only nine years old. All right, please hurry."

Tomi let the telephone drop. She leaned back, exhausted.

"He'll be right over," she managed to assure the family, and looked at the clock. One hour and fifty seconds to go. Two hours more of this and she'd be needing a doctor.

But not this one. She knew she wasn't going to like him. He has a deep, rich chuckle.

Harold was getting worse. His pink frogs had sprouted chicken wings. Suppose the poor little fellow died after she'd shaken him for nothing but a silly old jardiniere. Why hadn't she realized any child would do that way, once he felt the freedom of a farm.

Tomi, Great-aunt Hannah, Agatha, Parilla and even tottering old Jane, met the doctor at the roadside.

Measles

Tomi heaved a great sigh of relief when she saw him. Of course she would have preferred an old man. Young doctors couldn't cope with Great-aunt Hannah. However, this one seemed to be doing pretty well. She liked the way he threw his arm about Abe, when the old man shuffled up.

And then she chilled. He had looked at her. Here was another man with golden glints of laughter in his eyes. True, his eyes were roving, but he must have been associating with Allen Bartlett to have caught that infectious gleam.

Only the Carringtons were allowed inside the patient's room. Tomi giggled sharply as the physician closed the door smack against Great-aunt Hannah's pompadour.

She ran downstairs where she could watch the clock without being observed. Thirty minutes to go. Maybe they could take Harold to the hospital. He'd really have better care. Oh, she was a snake in the grass, balancing poor little Harold's life against the old farm!

Moments passed, then Doctor Tillman emerged from the sick-room. May weeping Carrington looking serious.

"No need for concern," the physician was saying. "It looks like a light case. Oh, Miss Toland—" he started downstairs—"may I see you alone a moment?"

Tomi led him into her little office and closed the door.

"I understand this is your home. I'm sorry, but I will have to place it under quarantine."

"Qua-qua—" gasped Tomi.

"That means that no one who has been exposed to the patient may leave the premises."

Tomi thought of the will. "But you can't do that," she cried faintly.

"But I can," corrected Tillman. "I am the city health physician and you are within the city limits. I don't want an epidemic in my territory and I shall take every means of preventing it."

Tomi blinked at the doctor. There were two—no, there were three of him. Then all three faded.

He caught her as she fell. Tomi sat propped on the old leather divan in her office, anxious eyes on the desk clock.

Quality of School Shouldn't Be Gauged by Type of Building

BY ANGELO PATRI

When people think of schools they see buildings and they measure the quality of the school by the beauty of its structure oftener than in any other terms. Communities vie with each other in putting up the handsomest structures. One meets palatial buildings set in forlorn meadows to which children are hauled from long distances, in all weathers, often under unpleasant conditions. The idea was to have a fine school, meaning building.

The Chinese have a proverb that says when the buildings are palatial the fields and granaries are empty. Often I think of that when I see these grand buildings and talk to the teachers who work in them. All the money went into the building, and the buses, and the extra large meeting rooms for the grownups. Often there wasn't enough left to grade the yard decently. That would have to come later when the teachers and mothers put on entertainments and gave suppers to raise the money. Beautiful buildings are inspiring—if they don't cost so much that their function is rendered impossible. The fact is, too many communities have made the mistake of thinking that the building is the school. It is not and never has been. That is why bewildered old timers look at this grand building and say, "We went to the little Red School House and you know, that school turned out some pretty good citizens." That school did, not because it was little and red, but because it had a teacher. If it lacked that teacher it did not turn out anything or anybody worth while.

What good is a grand building if the teacher is lacking? Teachers are like everything else in this world, they must be paid for and in many such schools they cannot be paid for and lesser people take their places. Qualifications are lowered when salaries are lowered. The best teachers go where they are best paid.

To become a good teacher long years of hard and costly study must be put in, long years of apprenticeship must be served under trained leadership, consecrated effort must be made to serve the cause of childhood.

"The qualities you most value in a teacher could not be paid for," said a school trustee.

I agree that money never pays moisture them with cold water and the real teacher, but the Jack of cover them with borax. Let the linens stand 20 minutes or so, then what the community wash pour a kettle of boiling water to do? If the fathers and mothers through the stain, holding the ket, were directly concerned with the stain, the stain disappears. The school's teacher would not be. This process may be used to remove overlooked stains as is so often the case, fruit stains.

Fatherless Child Faces Life With 2 Strikes on Him

BY DOROTHY DIX

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am in my third year at college but I shall have to leave very soon as I am about to become an unwed mother. The father of my baby, who is also an undergraduate, is willing to marry me, but if he did he would also have to withdraw from college, and I do not know whether I should allow him to make this sacrifice and discontinue his education. If I decide to leave school alone, should I go to a large city and give the child for adoption when it is born? I am loath to do this, since I feel that the child will be innocent and that it will need a mother's care. Also, I dearly love the father and feel that the child would mean a lot to me in the loneliness which I am sure to experience as a natural course due to my social downfall.

UNRESENTING.

Answer:

There can be no question of the vital importance of the boy marrying you as soon as possible. Don't wait another day. A college degree is a poor thing compared to the crime of bringing a little innocent child into the world branded with shame. If you have one spark of a sense of justice in your composition, or one throb of human pity in your heart, spare your child that. In a case like this, neither you nor the boy have a right to consider yourselves at all. Your every thought should be given to trying to protect your unborn child.

Perhaps you have thought about how cruel is the penalty laid upon an illegitimate child. Perhaps you do not know that the life of the fatherless child is made almost unbearable to him by his schoolmates, who taunt him with his misfortune and whose choicest witicism is to point the finger of scorn at him and cry out: "Where's your dad? Johnny hasn't any pa."

Perhaps you do not know that there are many schools and many professions from which an illegitimate child is barred. Perhaps you do not realize that if these days you can't fill out an application, even for the humblest job, without stating your parentage. And, these things being true, surely you could not think that whether a boy graduated from college or not was of the slightest importance compared with a child being saved from the handicap of being fatherless.

"At the time of my wedding my bridegroom's best man and my maid of honor will have been married to each other for a month. At their wedding next week, my fiancé is to be best man. I am told I was the bride's choice for maid of honor, but her mother insists that she have her sister. There is to be the smallest wedding breakfast for just the immediate families, and a large reception that same evening. I am of course invited to the reception but not to the breakfast. Considering everything, I think I should be invited to the breakfast."

Considering everything—I do agree that the bride might have considered you an exception, since you are evidently not only her best friend but the fiancée of the best man. And yet the fact that she can't invite you is very plain. It may be that they are twelve and you would make thirteen—and a fourteenth would make the loose brick in the wall through which the hurt feelings of all other friends might pour. If I were you I would try my best to forgive the bride for not wanting to hurt all her other friends by including one. She would undoubtedly have invited you to the breakfast if she could—even though the "why" is obscure. Perhaps you might get your fiancé to ask her fiancé if you feel that you will be more content if you know why it is not practical to in-

Now that ants are on the march again it will pay to keep food supplies in tight containers or in the refrigerator, also to sweep up promptly any crumbs of cake or bread. If they locate food, in a very short time the storage place may be swarming with ants.

A teaspoon of honey dropped into the heart of a corned apple when preparing apples for baking gives them a delicious flavor.

THE HOME GARDENER

by EDWIN H. PERKINS

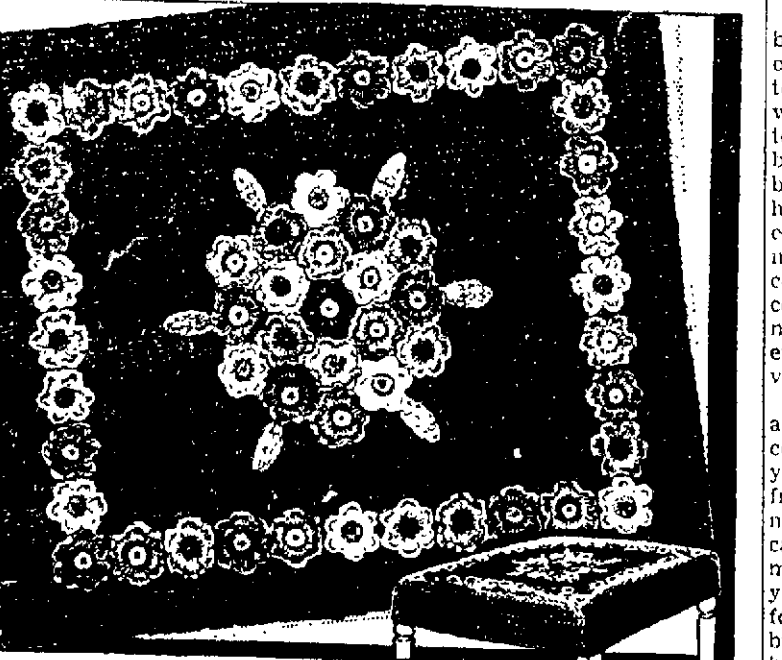

Following immediately upon their introduction to American gardens from South America, the montbretia assumed a place of prominence which they still rightfully hold. They bear a distinct resemblance to the gladioli and grow under almost similar cultural conditions.

The hybrid forms of montbretias add a distinction to any garden border. Best results are obtained when they are used in the middle ground where they create a distinct break between the background and the flowers next to them. Another reason for using them in such a location is that the stems are stiffly erect and in need of the softening effect furnished by surrounding plants. Plant them in groups of six or more for a flashy garden show.

Few flowers exceed the decorative value of montbretias when cut and placed in jars of cool water. Their cut-flower life is exceptionally long, in many instances exceeding that of the gladioli.

The plants are of easiest culture. Set the corms at least three inches deep in light soil where they can have the benefit of full sunshine. Keep the soil well cultivated around them until flowering begins. Flower color is intensified by frequent applications of weak liquid manure after the buds show color. They are quite hardy in warmer sections of the country but not reliably hardy in the north.

WEDDING BREAKFAST

A wedding breakfast for immediate families must be strictly limited to these members, because if this rule is broken by including one friend, then the feelings of every other devoted friend may be hurt irreparably! I am sure that it was because she realized the seriousness of making this exception that one bride has created the following difficult situation:

"At the time of my wedding my bridegroom's best man and my maid of honor will have been married to each other for a month. At their wedding next week, my fiancé is to be best man. I am told I was the bride's choice for maid of honor, but her mother insists that she have her sister. SCENES AT GIRL SCOUT SUMMER CAMP SITE

These sparkling waters, shady trails and picturesque spots will be the playground of Appleton Girl Scouts this summer and for many years to come, for they show some of the scenes in and around the new Appleton Girl Scout camp at Chalk Hills on the Menominee river which goes under construction immediately. The camp dates have been announced as June 30 to Aug. 11, and while the camp will not be complete in every detail for this season, sufficient accommodations for the first season will be constructed including a main building housing the kitchen and dining room, and the living quarters for the campers. The map at the right center shows the location of the camp, being situated about 110 miles north of Appleton on a peninsula in White Rapids lake. At the upper left is a portion of the shore trail in the vicinity of the proposed sites for two of the camp units, giving an idea of the seclusion, the woodland quiet and natural beauty of the place. The lower left of the map shows the entrance may be seen at the upper right, where a gate will be erected to keep out vehicular traffic from the camp area. The center picture is a scene looking northwest from the island across the channel from the camp site, and the lower photo shows the activities area where the girls can carry on their games, sports, story hours, and handicraft work, shaded from the sun by large, leafy trees. The property on which the camp will be located was leased without cost to Appleton Girl Scouts by the Wisconsin Michigan Power company for as long as they wish to use it.

Southern Influence Is Seen In Gown, Veil Designs for June Brides and Attendants

BY NELL CHAMBERLAIN

SILHOUETS which are approaching more and more those of the grandmothers' time, with tiny, trim waists and very full skirts, are making the bridal picture this season more quaint, more feminine if possible than they have been for several years. This year's bride will trail clouds of net, if she's really in the parade of fashion, for net seems to be the predominant note in spring wedding finery.

Starched net with shirred bodice, short sleeves with double puffs, and a skirt that is yards and yards around the hem makes a pretty picture for the bride, as does a combination net and lace with a long torso effect achieved by the lace insertions extending down over the hips. Satin is definitely taking a minor role for bridal dresses this year.

Lace bodices with net skirts are good this year as are marquisette gowns trimmed with lace insertions or satin bow knots. One sketch shows a skirt of yards and yards of billowing net topped by a bodice and sleeves formed of rows and rows of narrow silk lace edging over a net foundation.

White Popular

In spite of the example set by a few brides in the larger cities in the last year, colored wedding gowns are not being accepted by Appleton young women to any extent. White is still the popular mode, and the color note is left to the bride's attendants who usually choose the various pastels as pale pink and blue, peach, orchid and yellow.

A new note in bridal attire this season is the ankle length veil which is usually worn with a "blusher" or face veil over it. These can be worn either with or without a train on the dress. The choice as to a long or short veil is about evenly divided.

For a church wedding where long sleeves are desired, there are detachable mitts to be worn like gloves over the elbow but not quite reaching the edge of the sleeve.

The "Gone With the Wind" influence is being felt even in bridal attire, for there is a type of veil named for the best seller and advertised as an authentic reproduction of the veil worn by Scarlett O'Hara in the movies. Fitting in with the southern atmosphere is a hoop-skirted bridesmaid dress with puffed sleeves, sweetheart neckline and handmade bow trimming, with which is worn a net poke bonnet with velvet ribbon streamers.

Bridesmaids' dresses may match the bride's gown in design, or may Agreements between employers and workers in Sweden's paper, wood pulp, sawmill, textile and machine industries assured labor peace in 1940. The agreements covered small wage increases, as well as certain supplementary wages because of higher living costs.

Class D Team Will Show at Menasha

Appleton Papermakers To Battle Falcons Sunday Afternoon
START AT 3 P. M.
Manager Eddie Dancisak Names Starting Line-up for Locals

AFTER three days of "playing ball" in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium and otherwise keeping in condition, the Appleton Papermakers of the Wisconsin State league went out of doors again today at Interlake park. They staged a squad game preparatory to their first battle of the season, a practice game against the Menasha Falcons at Menasha at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Tomorrow's exhibition definitely will determine the 20 boys who will start the season as members of the Appleton team Thursday when the league race opens. They are the siftings from the 100 players who have worked under Manager Eddie Dancisak for the last couple weeks. Officers of the ball club and several persons closely connected with the game in other cities admit they look like "the goods."

Undoubtedly Manager Dancisak will give all the boys a chance to work. However, he has none of the deer and to name a probable starting lineup.

Ben Peck, Menasha product, will don the big mitt for the start of the game and then give way to Arneson and Ivy, two younger boys who have looked good in workouts.

Infield Lineup

Murphy, a left handed first sacker, will hold down the initial bag. He isn't so tall but is steady and has had experience. At second base there'll be Les Hoffkens who comes from Belleville, Ill., and who arrived here as a third sacker but has shown better at second base.

The starting shortstop will be Ted Tadge, something of the clown on the squad. Tadge has been working at second but because he has one of the best arms in the group has been moved to short. His right hand may be moved to short. His right hand may be moved to short. His right hand may be moved to short.

Here are two of the entertainment features of the Appleton Post-Crescent's fourth annual Fishermen's Party, Tuesday evening at the Rio theater. Miss Marie Zapp, above, Appleton dancing instructor, will open the show with a tap dancing number and has promised that it the folks like her she'll return for another. At the right is Constanza Eddie of Milwaukee, who won fame via Major Bowes' amateur radio hour and who can do numerous tricks with his "wind box." This year's program will feature three vaudeville numbers, two motion pictures and a talk. Then there'll be prizes and prizes and prizes. (Photo of Miss Zapp by Appleton Post-Crescent)

Farley Interested in Purchase of Yankees

FALCONS ARE READY
Menasha—The Menasha Falcons will open their home baseball season at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon when the Appleton Papermakers, entrants in the new Wisconsin State class D league will play at the Menasha ball park.

The Falcons already have had one practice tilt, losing to the Manitowish 5 to 3 score last Sunday. The tilt Sunday will be the last before the regular Fox Valley league schedule opens Sunday, May 12, with the Falcons at Kaukauna.

Badger Nadelove, new manager of the Falcons, probably will use his entire squad Sunday in an effort to determine the squad which will be carried through the regular season. All the pitchers probably will get a chance to work.

The Falcons should have a strong defensive infield with John Kolakowski at third, Sylvester Paulowski moved to shortstop from his customary third base position, Ed Zelinski at second, and Art Buzzanowski at first base.

The Falcon pitchers probably will be Connie Mack Berry, professional performer in basketball and football; John Knoll, a left-hander, and Joe Mayefski, a veteran of several years back who has not played because of illness in recent seasons. The mound staff will be looking for warmer weather before opening up.

Frank Kolakowski is the only Falcon catcher and does a steady job back of the plate. However, if he should be hurt, Manager Nadelove will be hard pressed for catching talent. H. Stutzkowski, Joe Nadelove, F. Stinski, A. Brizkie, and P. Osiewalski have been used in the outfield. Those who show the heaviest stick work will get the starting call.

IT'S THE INDIANS
Sheboygan—(P)—The Sheboygan entry in the new Wisconsin State Baseball league will be known as the Indians, directors have announced. The club has a working agreement with the Milwaukee Brewers.

LA CROSSE WINS AGAIN
La Crosse—(P)—The La Crosse Blackhaws of the new Wisconsin State Baseball league scored their second victory over a Northern league club yesterday, defeating the Fargo-Moorhead Twins, 3 to 2. The Blackhaws previously had won an exhibition game from the Eau Claire Bears.

New York Yankees Recall Buster Mills, Outfielder
New York—(P)—Colonel (Buster) Mills, right handed outfielder, who has had big league trials with the St. Louis Cardinals, the Boston Red Sox, the Brooklyn Dodgers and the St. Louis Browns, was recalled by the New York Yankees yesterday.

A member of the champions' Newark farm team, Mills has been hitting .222 in 11 games this season for the Bears.

Mills, a native of Ranger, Tex., will give the Yankees a needed replacement in the outfield where Joe DiMaggio and Jake Powell have been absent because of injury.

Run Out of Pitchers, Call Game at 40 to 4
Kettle Falls, Wash.—(P)—Northport High school gave all it had but lost its ball game with Kettle Falls 40 to 4.

The Northport coach sent every boy on the bench into the pitchers box in a futile effort to hold down Kettle Falls. The game was called at the end of the seventh because the last Northport pitcher—a girl—was getting tired.

Appleton, Milwaukee C.O.F. Teams to Meet
Appleton and Milwaukee Catholic Knights of Wisconsin will tangle in a return match here at 1:30 Sunday afternoon. Appleton won the first contest at Milwaukee in February. Two men's teams from each of the cities will bowl at Eagles alleys and women's teams will compete at St. Joseph alleys.

Yanks Recover Home Run Punch For 8-4 Triumph

Pound Three Circuit Blows to Defeat Chicago White Sox

By the Associated Press
NEW YORK—The world champion New York Yankees, who have fallen on evil days of late, recovered some of their home run punch yesterday to pound out an 8 to 4 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Three Yankee homers came in handy for Marse Joe McCarthy's charges because the White Sox rallied for three runs in the ninth inning on Joe Kuhel's homer, after rookie Marvin Breuer had held them to six hits in the first eight rounds.

Red Rolfe, George Selkirk and Charlie Keller hit circuit clouts for the champions, the latter two in the eighth inning off Clint Brown, who had replaced Edgar Smith.

The victory was Breuer's first major league victory and lifted the Yankees to a .500 percentage.

The Boston Red Sox, now in undisputed first place in the American league race, also put on a show of power in whacking out a 10-inning, 9 to 7 victory over the St. Louis Browns.

The Red Sox collected 12 hits, four of them home runs. Jim Tabor got two, Ted Williams and Manager Joe Cronin one each.

Tabor's second homer tied the score in the ninth and his single against the left field wall with the bases loaded in the tenth brought in Williams with the winning run. Seven pitchers toiled with Joe Heving getting credit for the win and Johnny Whitehead getting a black mark for losing.

In the only other game played in the majors, the Boston Bees won their second game of the season by hind the fine hurling and timely hitting of Bill Posedel—a 4-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The veteran right-hander held the Cards to seven hits and started the Bees on their winning rally with a double in the sixth inning. Lon Warneke, Jack Russell and Bob Bowman shared the mound for the Cards, allowing a total of 10 hits.

Rain and cold weather put a clump in the other contests.

Jones Blasts Shot Put Mark in Beloit Relays; Coe Repeats as Team Titlists

VINCE JONES, Lawrence college's giant weight man, turned in a stellar performance as he set a new shot put record and placed second in the discus during the fourth annual Beloit College Relays at Beloit last night.

Coe college of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, won the team title for the second consecutive year and the third time in the history of the carnival.

Competition in the weights was extremely strong this year, making Jones' performance all the more outstanding. He tossed the shot 47 feet, 9 inches to shatter the mark of 45 feet, 10 inches set by Bare of Bradley Tech in 1938 and to better state and Midwest conference marks. In his first throw of the afternoon preliminaries, Jones broke the old mark with a heave of 46 feet, 4 inches. He smashed his own mark on his last effort of the evening finals. In the discus, Jones qualified with a throw of about 129 feet and then placed second at night with a fling of 135 feet, 10 inches, the best he has done this year.

Barker of Grinnell won the discus with a distance of 144 feet, 11 inches.

Lawrence finished far down the list with 93 points. Lawrence pole vaulters, along with the others, were hampered by extremely cold weather and the winning height was far below what some of the entrants regularly vault. Orwig finished in a 4-way tie for fourth place in this event. Viking Coach A. C. Denney said his two freshmen relay teams looked promising.

29 Schools Complete

Two other new meet records were set as a crowd of 3,000 watched the competition among 29 midwestern colleges. Cold weather combined with soggy ground of the track—resulting from two days of snow this week—to slow the times in the races.

Chuck Bacon, Beloit sophomore, cleared 6 feet, 3 inches in the high jump for a narrow margin over the former record of 6 feet, 1 inch established in 1937 by Sam Letts of Lawrence.

Harry Barker of Grinnell, who was voted the meet's outstanding athlete, bettered his own javelin record with a toss of 181 feet, 9 inches. Last year he established a mark of 175 feet, 9 inches. He also won the discus to become the only double winner of the meet.

Coe college performers, winning five of the relay races, piled up 60 points.

Other point totals: Beloit 34; North Central 32; Grinnell 22; Bradley 20; Monmouth 20; Knox 15; Colorado college 14; Dubuque 12; Carleton 11; Wheaton 10; Lawrence 9; Loras 7; Cornell 6; Princeton 6; Ripon 6; Carroll 4; St. Ambrose 4; Elmhurst 3; Carthage 2.

Chuck Fenske, University of Wisconsin graduate student and outstanding miler of the year, ran a special paced three-quarter mile in the relatively slow time of 3 minutes 61 seconds.

JONES SETS NEW RELAYS RECORD

Pitted against stiff competition, Vince Jones, hefty Lawrence college athlete, led the way in the shot put event of the Beloit college relays at Beloit yesterday afternoon and evening. In the preliminaries, Jones cut loose with a heave of 46 feet, 4 inches to break the old mark of 45 feet, 10 inches. In the evening he went on to better his new mark, chalking up a toss of 47 feet, 9 inches. Jones took second in the discus.

Wisconsin 9 Scores Fourth Big Ten Win

Madison—(P)—Wisconsin chalked up its fourth Big Ten conference baseball victory yesterday, defeating Indiana 7 to 6 behind the pitching of John Saxer.

The Badgers were scored in the first five innings. In the fifth Lefty Smith, Badger third baseman, stopped what might have been a disastrous rally when he caught a low fly ball and stepped on third to double Gentil. Indiana knucked Saxer in the final frames but he pitched his way out of several tight spots.

It was Saxer's third win of the season. The teams play again today.

By Innings:

Yes, men, these prices DO give your income an outing.

"It's a picnic for the man who needs a summer suit this year." This expression, gentlemen, is not ours but that of a local man whose name you see in the Post-Crescent every week or so.

He was referring to our special sport coat at $14.75... that huge selection of sport garments that gives you everything in fabric and style at a "payable" price.</

$20,115 Premium Is High Bid for Courthouse Bonds

Winning Offer Made by First National Bank For Chicago Firm

Outagamie county's bonds of $385,000 for the new courthouse yesterday were sold by the executive committee for a premium of $20,115 with a 105 per cent interest rate to the Harris Trust and Savings bank, Chicago.

The winning bid of the Harris Trust company was entered by the First National bank, Appleton, and the premium offered was but $5 higher than that offered by the second high bidder, Wisconsin company, Milwaukee.

The interest rate is the lowest ever offered on municipal bonds in that state, it was said. There was brisk bidding for the bonds by representatives of 13 firms, all making offers until the amount of the premium rose to $17,000.

Outagamie county would pay $42,800 interest on the $385,000 bonds, but the $20,115 premium cuts the interest to $21,685. Supervisor John Botenack, Dale, said this week that he would insist that the premium money be placed in the general fund and be kept from the building fund. Speaking unofficially, a member of the building committee stated that the committee did not plan to ask for the premium to be used for construction of the new building.

The bonds will be delivered to the high bidder by June 3.

City Seeks Bids For Concessions At Spencer Field

Proposals Will be Opened by Works Board Tuesday Afternoon

The city of Appleton today asked for offers from business men to operate the concessions at Spencer field during the baseball season.

The bids will be opened at a meeting of the board of public works at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The council refused to grant operation of the concessions to the Appleton Baseball corporation on an offer of 10 per cent of the net receipts.

The decision to advertise for bids was made by aldermen Wednesday night after a heated argument over the merits of the baseball corporation's offer.

Bids were set up yesterday by the recreation committee so that bidders will know what the city expects of the successful bidder. Prices at the park must be the same as the prevailing prices in Appleton for each item sold in the stands.

The concessionaire must buy his products in Appleton and the council reserves the right to approve the items, regulate the time of hawking in the stands and the number of refreshment counters.

Last year's enrollment at the Appleton vocational school was 3,000 between the ages of 18 to 65. This school is available to every resident of Outagamie county at reasonable tuition, he said.

The strike cut off the major portion of Racine's milk supply yesterday and today. Drivers walked out at the Racine Pure Milk company following a deadlock in contract negotiations. SATURDAY TALK

A nine-year-old boy asks me to tell about mine-laying, so I shall say something about the subject today.

In warfare, mines are often placed in the water. They contain a powerful explosive, and are likely to sink any vessel which strikes them.

Early in the European war, Germany sowed mines in the North sea, and Great Britain did the same. The public does not know how many thousands were placed in the water. Many of the German mines were "magnetic" and did heavy damage until the British found ways to guard against them.

Mines can be laid by cargo steamers, cruisers or submarines, but they must have special fittings. An opening at the stern of a steamer or cruiser is used for dropping the mines.

Every mine must be water-tight if it is to explode. The case is sealed with great care.

One type of mine is dropped so a plummet, or small weight, goes down ahead of the heavy weight, or sinker. When the plummet strikes the bottom, it locks a windlass which has been unwinding the line above. The heavy weight keeps coming down to the bottom, and pulls the case of explosive below the surface of the water.

When people speak of a mine, they are thinking of the case of explosive, not of the plummet and sinker. Yet the mine would not work well if it did not have the other parts. An ordinary mine case would float about the surface, and would be a danger to the ships of all nations.

When a navy sows mines, it keeps track of where they are placed. Warnings are given to other vessels in the navy to be careful not to go through certain regions of the sea. Most countries also give warning to the world in general about where mines are laid.

A person might ask, "If warning is given what good are the mines?" The answer is that they may keep enemy vessels from traveling through many parts of the sea.

No navy is large enough to keep watch over hundreds of thousands of square miles of the sea or ocean. If mines are sown, they make it less hard for a navy to carry out a blockade.

Babson Looks for Long War; Says Russia Holds Winning Cards, Will Side With Allies

BY ROGER BABSON

St. Louis, Mo.—World War II has just started. Up until the time Hitler embarked on his Scandinavian campaign, there was always the possibility of a settlement around the peace table. Now this last hope of avoiding hostilities has been snuffed out. The war may well be a long one. Certainly, I see no hope of peace this year. Furthermore, I strongly believe that Russia—not Italy—holds the winning cards in this gigantic war game.

You read in the papers that Italy will soon be in the war on the side of Germany, but in my talks with army officers and governmental officials of England, I learn they have no fear of Italy. These men recognize that the Germans are a wonderful people; they did not want to go to war against them. But they have no fear of the Italians. Besides, the Italians do not like the Germans, nor do they like to fight. Mussolini is now in a bad fix. He has a big army in Ethiopia. In order to keep his supply lines open to Ethiopia, he must go through the Suez canal. This is absolutely controlled by France and England.

If Italy should declare war on the allies tonight, the canal would be shut up tight tomorrow, and Italy's Ethiopian army would be on the spot. Of course, if Italy could send another army to the Balkans and perhaps take Yugoslavia and Rumania. The British and French have over a half million men in the Near East with the idea of protecting the Balkans. If Italy went into the war to help Germany she could perhaps break through to the Black sea, but she could never get that allied army. It would need only to withdraw into Turkey so that it could not be surrounded or penned up.

Moreover, Italy has a very vulnerable coast line. Practically all her big cities are on the coast while her industrial cities are within a few miles of the French border. Italy may go into the war before it is over; but my guess is that she will wait until the outcome is more certain. I should be very much surprised if Italy were foolish enough to get mixed up at the present time. If she does, it will not disturb the allies very much. They would only like to know where she stands so they could cut their cloth accordingly.

Fears Over War Situation Curb Exchange Trade

Light Selling Puts Leaders Down Fraction to A Point

New York—(P)—Fears of unexpected European war developments over the weekend caused the trimming of speculative sells in today's stock market.

Trends were indefinite until the final hour when light selling put a number of leaders down fractions to a point or so. The fact offerings were never forced was comforting to bullish proponents who recalled that real activity in the past several weeks usually has accompanied rising prices.

With the ticker tape loading during the greater part of the proceedings, transfers for the two hours ran to approximately 350,000 shares.

While efforts of the administration to halt the spread of the overseas conflict and Italy, were consoling to financial quitters, the presence of the big allied fleet in the eastern Mediterranean revived some market apprehension as to eventualities in that part of the world. Possibilities of a drastic British cabinet upheaval in the wake of the Norwegian campaign also were given as an excuse in boardrooms for the lack of stock buying demand.

Although affairs abroad aroused varying conjectures as to possible repercussions on American trade, domestic industrial prospects provided a mildly bolstering influence for the share list.

Steels were up for a while, as forecasts were heard of an upturn in next weeks mill operations. Both U. S. Steel and Bethlehem eventually slipped.

Douglas was the best performer among aviation, getting ahead more than a point at one time. Lagging, however, were Boeing, Glenn Martin, United Aircraft and American Airlines.

In almost most of the time were General Motors, Du Pont, General Electric, Loft, International Paper, preferred, American Hawaiian Steamship, Phelps Dodge, Montgomery Ward and Consolidated Edison.

Resistant were Chrysler, Sears, Roebuck, Texas Corp., Johns-Manville, Consolidated Oil, Kennecott, Santa Fe and American Telephone.

Bonds and commodities were a trifle ragged. American securities moved up at Amsterdam, only important foreign market open today.

Without much movement in the curb were Gulf Oil, Aluminum of America, Creole Petroleum and United Light and Power. American Republics edged forward, as did Aviation and Transportation.

Have to Feed 'Em To Make 'Em Work

Lexington, Ky.—(P)—The University of Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station has found that fooling hens by turning on electric lights at 4 a. m. shifts egg production from summer to winter but doesn't increase egg production for the year.

This finding was announced after three years of testing artificial lighting in laying houses.

"However," the station reported, "since eggs are usually higher in price of winter, early morning lighting of the laying houses often pays."

The Agricultural department warned an increase of food should accompany lengthening of the hen's working day.
